

Testimonials: John G. Self Speaking Engagements

From Reed Morton, Career and Leadership Development Coach & Consultant:

John engages his audience by beautifully illustrating his message with stories that connect to big, shared experiences.

He has a strong sense of right and wrong and delights in being able to connect messages to just outcomes. His quiet, thoughtful approach leaves listeners with a sense of relief that a wrong has been righted—even if not on a grand scale.

John has a special ability to listen to the nuances in the audience and refocus his tone and direction effortlessly. He was a print reporter early in his career, which really shaped him as a communicator and taught him how to listen and discern the reaction from his audience.

John is a physical presence of stature and graceful movement and he has a gift for energizing people through expression and gesture.

From Guy Snyder, Director of Education and Credentialing at American Academy of Medical Administrators:

Lots of people have something to say. John Self says what you need to hear in a no-nonsense, no punches held, conversation with you. He presents the facts in a way that will keep your attention and provide you with real, workable solutions. Speaking at the American Academy of Medical Administrator's Annual Conference in 2012, John gave our audience exactly what they demanded, practical tools that they could put to use the moment they returned to their jobs!

From Tom Driskill:

John Self sets the bar so high others can only hope to try and emulate him. I have had many occasions to be in the audience when he was a keynote presenter, most recently at the American Academy of Medical Administrators (AAMA) 2012 conference in San Antonio. John is so effective in his presentations that he literally takes the breath away from the audience then returns it with a smile. If you ever need a keynote speaker who will "ensure" the success of your conference, ask John Self to join you and you will be amply rewarded.
